

Management and Leadership: Achieving Balance

Rules

- Index fingers pointed straight
- Pole rests on top Everyone must always have
- finger touching the pole!
- If one person loses contact, start over

Table Group Debrief

- 1. How did leadership get established?
- 2. How would you describe the group dynamic?
- 3. Did anyone attempt to establish a productive group dynamic?
- 4. Did anyone inquire re: goals beyond "lowering the pole?"
- 5. How did the group align (or not) on a particular path forward?
- 6. What process was settled upon to drive success? Who managed the implementation of this process? How?

Controlling and Problem-solving	Motivating People

What Leaders Really Do, Harvard Business Review, 2001

Becoming a better manager is about honing your craft; creating habits of organization and interaction that allow the people who work for you to be best utilized and focused on achieving company goals.

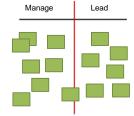

Becoming a better leader is primarily an internal process of self-reflection; learning to think and then behave differently. It's about seeing yourself as a leader, and then behaving in ways that make others see you as a leader, too.

Manage or Lead. Do Both. Erika Anderson, Forbes, 2012
